A Guide to K-12 Program Development in the Arts

A Guide to K-12 Program Development in the Arts is a must-have publication for anyone who seeks to design standards-based programs or curriculum in the arts (dance, music, theatre, and the visual arts). This innovative document outlines proven methods that district curriculum leaders, arts administrators, local curriculum development teams, and university curriculum classes can use to develop a local vision of quality arts education, then make that vision a reality in their classrooms. The Guide provides program development worksheets and effective step-by-step strategies appropriate for differing local situations, and its Appendices and companion web sites provide varied models from exemplary arts curricula to illustrate and guide curriculum work.

Features of the guide:

- Step-by-step procedures for developing a local arts program vision, philosophy, goals, objectives, and assessment
- How to do arts program self-assessment
- Guidelines for turning standards into learning objectives
- User-tested forms designed to help small and large arts departments complete a local curriculum
- A comprehensive chapter on the importance of the arts in society and in schools' core curriculum
- Companion web-based materials, including varied model arts curricula and assessments
- A chapter describing the resources --including time, facilities, and technology-- necessary for delivering a quality program
- Common issues faced by arts programs and how to solve them
